We sat alone; your little hand Lay on the table by my own. Only a little hand, and yet I cannot, while I live, forget The tremor of profound regret When I saw how your hand had grown.

We parted: but your little hand
Lay on the table, cold and fair;
Wide was the scope its numbers spanned:
Three bright-robed queens, serene and bland,
Two rampaut jacks, a h-ppy hand;
While I had only one small pair.
